

GENERAL PROVISION OF THE EVA HELPFUL FOUNDATION

- I. As parents dedicate more hours to their jobs, the crucial engagement with their children diminishes. This reduction in parental involvement has resulted in children missing out on essential lessons and values that are typically imparted through direct interactions with their parents.
- II. The absence of active parenting is not merely a temporary concern; it has lasting implications for children's development. With limited guidance, many children navigate complex social and emotional landscapes independently. This often drives them to seek affirmation and companionship through social media and digital platforms, which cannot substitute for the nurturing and foundational support gotten through parenting.
- III. The ripple effects of inadequate parenting extend into educational settings, where numerous challenges—such as behavioural issues and a decline in respect—are frequently linked to the absence of positive values established at home.
- IV. We must prioritise family time and encourage active parental engagement in children's lives to address these pressing issues. Restoring this essential connection can help cultivate a supportive environment that promotes growth and development.

Our Values

- I. Changing Values: As times evolve, traditional values may be challenged. It's essential to reflect on which values we want to preserve and promote.
- II. Mental Health: Imparting positive values builds a positive state of mind and mental well-being for our children.
- III. Civic Responsibility: Caring for the next generation is a collective responsibility. Communities must foster environments where children can thrive.
- IV. Divine and Civic Duty: There is a moral imperative to instill positive values in children, leading to a more compassionate and just society.
- V. Sustainable Future: Prioritizing the education of our children aligned with sustainability, ethics, and mutual respect.
- VI. Collective Action: Building a better future requires collaboration among families, educators, and community leaders to create supportive systems for children.

Objectives

The Eva Helpful Foundation (EHF) has outlined several key objectives aimed at fostering the development of children and adolescents:

1. Impart Reputable Values and Character: To instill strong moral values and promote responsible character development.
2. Develop a Toolkit for Socio-Cultural Integration: To create resources that help children and adolescents integrate into diverse communities through reputable values.
3. Promote Positive Mental Health Values: To advocate for mental health awareness and positive values, ensuring emotional well-being.
4. Conduct and Support Research: To engage in research initiatives focused on enhancing the values of children and adolescents.
5. Facilitate Early-Stage Professional Development: To offer professional values that prepare children and adolescents for future professional success.
6. Create an Academy for Children's and Adolescents Values: To establish an academy dedicated to educating families and communities about children's and adolescents' values.
7. Promote Livelihood Development and Sustainability: To encourage values that support sustainable livelihoods for children and adolescents.
8. Protect the Environment: To foster values and attitudes that contribute to environmental protection and sustainability.
